Under our rules a man who has never served a day as a policeman may be appointed to the position of captain or sergeant over the tried and efficient officer who may be deficient in penmanship or some other requirements of our examinations. Mayor Wheeler of Auburn says: No. 10. In the application of the law to appointments, it is merely confined to the police department. The limited number outside of that is not sufficient to base an intelligent opinion. No. 11. It relieves appointing officers from political pressure based on party considerations. In appointments to the police force it has not thus far, in results, proved its superiority over the system in practice with the commissioners prior to the enactment of the Civil Service law. A special fitness is required of police officers....
