Excerpt: . . . excellently attended to by the Red Cross, as, for example, through the Red Cross Institute, New York City, with which we are cooperating, which has sent Dr. Edward Devine abroad for personal investigation and service in the field. There is also the work of Mr. McMurtrie, who is collecting a bibliography on the subject of cripples. The matter of investigating the extent of the crippling and of providing the surgical and medical attention necessary is being admirably handled under the able leadership of the Surgeon-General and other Government representatives, already famous in the medical and surgical profession, in Washington. Too much credit cannot be given to Dr. Franklin Martin and SurgeonGeneral Gorgas for the progress that they have made in this great work in the short time since the day after the declaration of war, when they individually honoured one of the writers by giving him an interview, for the purpose of outlining possible work along these lines, since which time he has been honoured by being appointed on Dr. Martins committee reporting to the Council of Defence, and is now also co-operating with Colonel Owen and other famous doctors in the Surgeon-Generals department. The psychologists have appointed committees to investigate all branches of the subject that come within their field. The psychotherapists are working on their aspect of the problem, and Mr. George Edward Barton, of the Consolation House at Clifton Springs, Past-President of the National Society for the Promotion of Occupational Therapy,...
