In 1920 thirty-five counties studied had 18 per cent of their population as active members in Protestant churches, whereas in Clay County, as has been seen, the proportion of church members was 27 per cent. The average church in Clay County has 135 members and in Jennings County eighty-seven, as compared with an average membership of ninety-three for the thirtyfive specimen counties in this region. One-third of the churches in Clay County and nearly half the churches in Jennings have less than fifty members. In this respect Jennings tallies almost exactly with the average for the thirty-five counties of the Middle West in which 47 per cent of the churches have less than fifty members, while the churches of Clay County are considerably larger.
